

School of Journalism

St. Patrick's Building 346

The School

Director of the School:

Peter Johansen

Supervisor of Graduate Studies:

Catherine McKercher

The School of Journalism offers courses leading to the degree of Master of Journalism. The emphasis in the M.J. program is on advanced professional education for those who are or intend to become practising journalists in the news media. In practical terms, this entails both the polishing of professional journalistic skills to a high level of proficiency and advanced education in a related field of study. Provision is made also for students who wish to undertake research in journalism and mass media.

Following a common first year of professional coursework, students in the master's program will choose one of three areas of concentration in their second year of study:

Specialized Print Reporting

At present specializations are offered in the fields of politics/public administration, international affairs and economics/business. Others may be added as resources come available.

Television Journalism

The focus of this specialty will be the study of advanced techniques in reporting, writing and producing television journalism programs.

Journalism Studies

This program is designed for applicants who have mastered the skills of reporting and writing for the news media but who wish to spend a year studying their craft and/or the news industry. This specialty encompasses a number of topics, which include the role of the media in society as it is conceived by selected social and political theorists, communications law, politics and the media, the economics of the media and journalism history.

Carleton's School of Journalism is uniquely situated for advanced journalism study. It offers ready access to many of the people and institutions that most directly influence Canadian affairs: Parliament, federal government departments and agencies, embassies, business and labor organizations, and major economic and cultural institutions.

Master of Journalism

Admission Requirements

The Master of Journalism program comprises twenty half courses (or the equivalent). Most applicants will be admitted to the first year of a two-year course of study, but some may qualify for admission directly to the second year (see below). An admissions committee, including the supervisor of graduate studies, will determine the admissions qualifications of each applicant.

Admission will be selective. Admission will not be guaranteed to all who meet the published minimum requirements, as there are many more qualified applicants each year than there are available spaces.

A student who holds a bachelor's or master's degree from a recognized university in a field other than journalism may be admitted to the first year of study if he or she achieved at least high honors standing. Such students who complete the core first year, outlined below, and meet the requirements of the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research (see page 22) may proceed to second year.

Applicants who have three-year (pass) journalism degrees with high honors standing may be admitted to a first year made up largely of approved courses from the Faculties of Arts and Social Sciences. Such students may proceed to the second year of study if they have achieved high honors standing.

A limited number of spaces will be made available for direct admission to the second year of the M.J. program. Students must normally possess one of the following qualifications to be considered for this advanced admission: a B.J. (Honors) or equivalent with high second-class standing, or a degree in another discipline from a recognized university plus at least five years of professional experience in journalism, or long and distinguished professional experience in journalism. Students with suitable professional qualifications but no degree may occasionally be admitted to a program in which they take a required number of undergraduate courses in addition to the M.J. program.

Application is made on forms available from the School of Journalism. The university deadline for application is July 1, but students applying for the first year of the program are advised to apply by June 1 as enrollment in the school is limited.

All applications received after June 1 will normally be considered only for entry into the program in the year following.

As a condition for graduation, all students are required to have a minimum of four months of practical experience in the media, and a working knowledge of a second language, preferably French.

Program Requirements

First Year

Candidates admitted to the first year of the Master of Journalism program must complete the following courses before proceeding to the second year of study:

Academic Standing

All candidates are required to obtain a grade of B- or better in each course in the program. A candidate may, with the recommendation of the school and the approval of the dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research, be allowed a grade of C+ in one full course or each of two half courses.

Full-time students in a ten-credit M.J. program are advised that their thesis or research essay proposal must be formally approved within eighteen months of initial registration. Students in a five-credit program must have the proposal formally approved by the middle of their second term of full-time registration. Due dates for part-time students will be adjusted accordingly. Students failing to file a proposal may not be permitted to register in subsequent terms until this requirement has been met. Approval of proposals shall be the responsibility of a thesis committee appointed by the director of the school.

Students are advised to consult the general regulations section of this calendar for other regulations relating to academic standing.

Graduate Courses*

First Year:

- Journalism 28.500F1 or W1

Journalism and Society I

An examination of the conditions under which genuine communication is possible in a modern democratic society, with special attention to patterns of journalistic practice, media ownership and governmental regulation in Canada, Britain and the United States. Emphasis is placed on certain traditional texts as well as current research studies related to journalism and communication.

A seminar course examining literature and other sources in an attempt to understand continuing and emerging political, social and economic problems in Canada and elsewhere.

- Journalism 28.541F1 or W1
Journalism Law
The purpose of this course is to prepare journalists to function comfortably within the legal and ethical guidelines governing their occupation. The course also aims to help them avoid the large errors in reporting legal matters. Topics studied and discussed include: the difference between civil and criminal law; contempt of court; free press, fair trial; revealing of sources; civil defamation; criminal libel; obscenity; copyright; privacy; government secrecy; advertising law.

Second Year:

- Journalism 28.560T2
Journalism and Society II
This course involves an examination of the practices and problems of journalism, and the role of journalism in modern society. Students will be asked to read texts in which journalists examine their craft and in which non-journalists analyze and comment on the manner in which journalism and communication systems are organized in modern society. The course seeks to integrate the analysis of journalism practice into general theories of media and society.

- Journalism 28.570T2
Specialized Print Reporting
This course attempts, through a combination of seminars and individual or small-group tutorials, to integrate advanced journalistic skills with knowledge gained in specialized areas such as politics, international affairs, and economics. Students will study approaches to and problems in reporting in specialized areas, and work with senior professionals to research, report and write interpretive articles in those specialities.

- Journalism 28.572T2
Television Journalism
Students will be asked to analyze and, as resources permit, report, write and produce news and public affairs television programs.

- Journalism 28.575T2
Professional Practices
A senior seminar and practicum for second-year students in the specialized print reporting and television streams. Elements of the course include story analysis, publishing/broadcasting practices, ethical practices, management practices, language analysis, operation and practices of news services.

- Journalism 28.580F1 or W1
Survey Methods for Journalists
An examination of basic research design and data collection with emphasis on problems of interpretation.
